Ministry of Culture Youth and Sports Greet T.I.F.F. '03

Arta Dade: I Feel Very Well to Baptize this Activity

"Festival international, in which all authors feel that they are equal in the competition of film production..."

First of all, I would like to tell you that I feel very good while addressing cinematographers, actors and film producers, and at the same time baptize this event, which is very important for all of us: "Tirana Film Festival", a festival which is organized for the first time in Albania, an international festival, in which all authors feel that they are equal in the competition of film production. Our cinematographers – despite the numerous obstacles they have to face – have often tried to make Albanian movies and take them to various festivals in Europe and beyond, but with the first step of this Festival, they are provided with the opportunity of presenting their films at home.

The Albanian Ministry of Culture, Youth and Sports is happy to give its initial support to such event – with the hope that this will only be the beginning of a success story – because it reflects creative and intellectual values of a great potential, that require support from state institutions, and which need to establish a tradition of their own.

I take this occasion to greet the initiators of this event, Mr. Domi and Mr. Butka, who, with much strong will and commitment, are realizing their dream and goal of transforming Tirana into a center where the film is going to speak in various languages, of contemporary schools and experiments.

I extend my best wishes to its first edition... ■

Viktor Gjika on T.I.F.F '03

Opportunity of Confrontation Among Artists and Artistic Alternatives

Viktor Gjika, one of the outstanding names of the Albanian cinematography, considers a fortune the fact that Tirana International Film Festival is held for the first time in the Albanian Capital. He said that "the first international festival of the short film serves to the recognition of the Albanian cinematography in the world, while holding in Tirana such an event provides opportunities for a confrontation among artists by creating a significant space for the introduction of new artistic alternatives."

Viktor Gjika, director of the Albanian "Shqipëria e re" cinematographic studio during the 1984-1991 period, said that the genre of the short film has already been explored in Albania, but that in the long short history of the Albanian cinematography has prevailed the production of long films.

Speaking of the priorities of this genre, which in few minutes conveys vital messages and the life experience, as well as a philosophy of its own, Gjika, winner of several national awards said that the short film takes priority also for the fact that it offers a chance of test to new artists who have not yet found the opportunity to experience the long film "This festival is a challenge for filmmakers of all generations," he said, adding that "in the days of this important organization, cinematographers and artists will be able exchange their experience and establish following contacts with one another. Director of well known films such as "The Eighth in Bronze," "General Gramophone," "The Second November," "In Every Season," Gjika says that in the road of this activity that aims to turn into an annual event, this time is not apparently very important the competition rather than its promotion, as well as the values of the contemporary cinematography to be presented by at least 30 countries of the world.

Luce, with the Ten Best Directors of Short Film

Istituto Luce, a company of the famous Cinecittà Holding, is one of Italy's most important film companies known worldwide especially for its film archives dating from the beginnings of cinematography to the day. Since its foundation in 1924 to the present day Istituto Luce has played a key role in the history of Italian and international cinema. Its primary goal was to spread culture and knowledge. Soon Luce introduced the first sound films in Europe and took up the production of the greatest films of the period paving the way to the opening of Cinecittà that would later be known worldwide as the "Hollywood on the Tiber". Thousands of hours of film archives produced or acquired in the course of the years have made Luce's archives one of the most important in Europe and in the world. Istituto Luce is the first and the only that has brought in the Albanians' memory the wedding of the King Ahmet Zog with Geraldine.

"Fellini's Roma", 1972

"A story of a city," to quote Fellini. In Roma, Fellini strings together a series of images of Rome, and through his eyes this special city becomes a living, breathing organism. Roma is quite possibly Fellini's most avowedly autobiographical film to date - a loving document of his own personal encounter with Rome. Starring Fiona Florence, Britta Barnes, Pia de Doses, Marne Maitland and Peter Gonzales as Fellini at 18. Italian with English subtitles.

An anticipatory consideration of the new technologies made Luce be the first film company in the world to offer most of its archives on the Internet for free viewing. Besides its archives, Istituto Luce has represented over the years the most important film producers and distributors in Italy. Today Luce distributes more than 40 Italian or international films annually in theatres or Home Video.
